MEDIA ADVISORY

Below is a statement from the Iditarod Trail Committee (ITC) with regard to current trail conditions for Iditarod XLV:

As is the case each year, the Iditarod Trail Committee staff and crews have been monitoring trail conditions closely, and in particular, sections of the trail in the Alaska Range. While Southcentral, in general, has experienced more than adequate snowfall, Rainy Pass and the Dalzell Gorge have not.

We will continue to monitor trail conditions and will make a final determination as to the location for the Iditarod race Re-Start on Feb. 10. As always, our commitment is to ensure the very best possible race for the field of 75 teams that are entered in Iditarod XLV.

Editor's note: The Iditarod Trail Committee does not have any further information beyond the above statement and will not be available for interviews at this time. As aforementioned in the statement, ITC will provide updated information on Feb. 10.
