

Solution for Sanka's Sounds Alike Story #1

During the Iditarod, sled dogs are quite happy to (see – sea) the Bering (See – Sea). Unalakleet is the first village on the Gold Coast. It marks mile 700 of the trail. By the time the dogs reach Unalakleet, with their (tails – tales) standing tall, there are many (tails – tales) to tell. Some stories might be about the (whether – weather), some stories might be about the trail and some stories might be about the wind and how it (blew – blue) along the Yukon River. Sometimes the sky is very (blew – blue) but the mushers and dogs can't see the sky because of ground blizzards. This happens when strong winds blow previously fallen snow while it's not really snowing. In this situation, the mushers can't (see – sea) the trail so they depend on the (nose - knows) of the lead dog or dogs. The (knows – nose) (nose – knows) (where – ware – wear) the trail is.
