

By Public Lands Roadtrip: Iditarod National Historic Trail in Alaska by mypubliclands (2017) <https://www.flickr.com/photos/mypubliclands/1821515796/>
Attribution (<http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/2.0/>)
Photo Attribution by PhotoForClass.com

VS

Parkour #02 by Jess Jr (2016) <https://www.flickr.com/photos/jessjr/124320231/>
Attribution: Non-Commercial (<http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc/2.0/>)
Photo Attribution by PhotoForClass.com

Iditarod vs Parkour

Bark! Bark! The dogs are so excited for the Iditarod start. The Iditarod is a race that is about history. It started in 1973. The race begins in Willow, Alaska and ends in Nome, Alaska. The Iditarod is about 1,049 miles long. While you're racing you get to see wildlife.

It is time to compare the awesome sport Iditarod to another sport. This sport is called parkour.

Clang! Clang! That's the sound of someone doing Parkour. Parkour is where you do rolls, vaults, tic-tac and precision moves. Parkour is fun. It helps you go faster in optical courses. They have classes for parkour at community recreation centers.

The Iditarod is special because it is a very caring race and anyone who is 18 years old can do it, and you don't have to win to be a winner.