

Iditarod

VS!

Ski Racing

Thump! Thump! The Iditarod is a breathtaking sport pulled by dog teams through mountains, forests, and frozen lakes all just to get to the finish line. It stretches across nearly 1,000 miles from Willow to Nome, Alaska. You have to start with 12-16 dogs and finish with at least 5 dogs. Sportsmanship is an important part in the Iditarod. If someone needs help you have to pull over and help them. I think the Iditarod is a great tradition!

It was a close race but Iditarod wins by a nose!

Now for a sport so fast you go by in the blink of an eye. Downhill ski racing is a fun, hard sport where you race down a steep hill dodging obstacles and trying to get to the bottom of the mountain as quickly as possible. It's an Olympic sport that takes place on a groomed mountain. There are flags every 26 feet you have to weave in and out of. If you miss one or fall down you will be disqualified. I think downhill skiing is a very fun sport.
